Ancient Murrelet

Synthliboramphus antiquum

Aug. 5 Bodega Harbor, Sonoma Co., Calif: 1 in the channel joining the bay and the harbor. We couldn't believe it when we pulled up at the end of the bay road near the jetty and saw a beautiful Ancient Murrelet in the channel in front of us not more than 50 yds. away. All field marks for winter bird: white sides, breast, throat with dark projection from shoulder into breast, all dark wings, back, crown, and face (below eye); white extended up through neck to nape. Bill definitely yellowish and thick and short — tanager-like. Trace of stripes on back which is found in breeding plumage. First August record for California?

Tufted Puffin
Lunda cirrhata

July 6 — Moss Beach, San Mateo Co. Calif: 1 breed-plum. flew north right past us about 200 yds. from shore, L.C. Binford and I saw one at this same spot. June 17, 1973. These are the only times I've seen this species from shore. Perhaps they breed on offshore rocks in the area, such as those at San Pedro Pt.

Sep. 22 — Monterey Bay boat trip: 1 ad. in nearly full winter plumage. Could barely fly. About 8 miles w. of Pt. Pinos.

Oct. 6 — Monterey Bay boat trip - 1 ad.

Yellow-billed Cuckoo
Coccyzus americanus

July 8 Sacramento R., 4 mi. n. of Glenn, Glenn Co., Calif: 3. Two on David Gaines's Am. Birds Breeding Bird Census plot and one about 1/4 mile to the north. We got good looks at two of the birds. The most frequent call was a mournful coo-ins which was very similar to that of the Roadrunner. The guttural call was very ventriloqual, and the bird inflated its entire gular region to make the sound. The distinctive series of "coups" was also heard, but less frequently. Dave said most foraging is done in disturbed second growth (willows + cottonwoods) but that the nest may be in more mature riparian forest; habitat requirements appear to be wet areas + willow thickets - mature forest not necessary. Seasonal flooding necessary to maintain the disturbed nature of the habitat.

The birds appeared mildly interested in tape-recorded cuckoo "coups" (Dave said their interest had waned with time), but one responded fairly vigorously to my whistled imitation of the cooing, coming to within 40'. This was the first time I'd seen this species in Calif.

Allen's Hummingbird

Selasphorus sasin

July 3 373 Gravatt Dr, ~~Berkeley~~ Oakland, Alameda Co Calif: Numerous ad. ♂♂ and ♀♀ or imms. at feeder. Some ad. ♂♂ losing gorget.

July 4 373 Gravatt: 10-25 ♂♂, numerous probable ♀♀. One display.

July 5 373 Gravatt: same as yesterday, but no display

July 7 373 Gravatt: 1+♂

July 8 373 Gravatt: 1♂

July 17 373 Gravatt: 9 Selasphorus were captured at feeder with insect net. All were immatures by the bill corrugations. There were 8♂, 1♀. Seven of the males were very probably Allen's by the narrow outer rectrices. 5 confirmed to be sasin

July 19 U.C. Botanical Garden, Strawberry Canyon, Alameda Co., Calif: 1 ad. ♂ - a late date for an ad. ♂

July 27 373 Gravatt: of 10 birds captured, at least 7 are almost certainly Allen's by virtue of very narrow outer tail feathers. Eight of 10 birds caught were males. Only 3 measured out to be sasin

July 31 U.C. Botanical Garden: 1 imm. ♂ displaying (no whoosh at the bottom of the dive.

Aug. 3 373 Gravatt: at least one captured and tail feathers saved. But this was later found to be a Rufous

1 found and identified first by Sadie Brown. Back definitely greenish, chest greenish, yellowish on underparts, white eye-ring, white wing bars, small size, flycatcher feeding habits. Silent, unfortunately. Watched leisurely for 10 minutes. Incredible in winter, but one was found in nearby Strawberry Canyon for three winters in a row

Brown Thrasher
Toxostoma rufum

Dec. 1 7 Tamalpais Rd., Fairfax, Marin Co., Calif. 1 was seen coming to feed on seeds at the home of Morton Wilson where it has returned to winter for three years in a row now. It was a beautiful orange-rusty bird with much grayness around a yellow eye - it should really be named Orange Thrasher or at least Rufous Thrasher. — "Brown" is a misnomer

Observer Van Remsen Number of birds

Time of Day 1245 Light conditions good sunlight

Distance to bird 30-40' Optical equipment 10×50 binocs

Length of time observed 10 minutes

Sex male Plumage (e.g. Breeding) breeding

Overall appearance and relative size: a small, short-tailed warbler

Bill: warbler shape, dark

Crown and forehead: blue-gray

Nape: blue-gray

Face: blue-gray with partial white eye-ring

Eye: dark

Throat: bright lemon yellow sharply delineated from face color

Breast and sides: bright lemon yellow

Belly and flanks: white, sharply demarcated from yellow breast

Undertail coverts: white

Back: blue-gray with triangular greenish spot in center

Wings: dark blue-gray with 2 white wing bars

Underwings: Not observed

Rump: Not observed

Uppertail coverts: Not observed

Upperside of tail: not remembered

Underside of tail: not observed

Legs: not remembered

Behavior: Foraged extremely quietly in dense blue oak foliage about 10 feet from ground, doing some fluttering.

Voice: Silent

Habitat: Blue-oak – digger pine foothills at a little pool or two of standing water surrounded by willows

How identification was decided – elimination of similar species:

Combination of

1) green back
2) yellow throat, breast sharply bordered by white belly, blue-gray face
3) blue gray upperparts with partial white eye-ring
4) 2 wing bars

eliminates any warbler I can think of

NOV. 10 Desert Center, Riverside Co, Calif: 1 ♀ in same palm tree where Guy McCaskie + Jon Dunn had found it week before. It remains inside the palm foliage feeding on flies swarming over the rotting palm fruit (small dark berries). Extremely tame, allowed incredible close approach, and would not leave the tree unless all four of us shook the fronds violently. A lifer for me — but an extremely nondescript bird: like Yellow-rumped but had a yellow patch below the eye in the auricular region that is apparently diagnostic; shorter tail without conspicuous spots; yellow rump, but more greenish-yellow than the lemon yellow of the Audubons; smaller overall body; streaks on breast more uniform in outline and pattern; call soft and different.

Black-throated Green Warbler

Dendroica virens

Sep. 16 Pt. Loma, San Diego Co, Calif: 2. At. about 1200, I glimpsed a bird which I thought was this species but when I yelled to Ericlson and Stallcup, the bird had already disappeared. I saw a very black chest extending down the sides in a large streak, not just two thin stripes. The face was almost pure lemon yellow - only a trace of the cheek patch. But I didn't see the back. We could not find the bird for an hour. Then I found another bird in the same flowering eucalyptus which I thought might also be a Black-thr Green, but it looked less like a true Black-thr Green because the chest was not as solidly black and the sides only had two thin black streaks. and cheek more strongly marked. However, the underparts were pure white and the back was definitely bright green. I showed it to McCaskie, Dunn, Stallcup, Ericlson, and LeValley, all of whom agreed that it was a Black-throated Green, although I can hardly blame them for not believing that there were 2 birds. Details follow.

Oct. 21 Scotty's Castle, Death Valley N.M., Inyo Co, Calif: 1i. I was attracted to a Townsend's-type chip note and the bird proved to be an extremely tame Black-throated Green — so tame that I took several pictures at close range, even getting a shot of the yellow vent — I hope they turn out, so that I won't have to write up a description.

Please fill out as accurately as possible. Include only those details of which you are certain and only those observed in the field; leave blank details not observed. Attach any additional comments or details on separate sheets. Please print or type

Species Black-throated Green Warbler Date(s) 16 Sept. 1973

Location SE corner of Rosecroft Gardens, Point Loma, San Diego

County San Diego State Calif Elevation ~ 300'

Observer Van Remsen Number of birds 1

Time of Day 1400 Light conditions excellent - sun from back

Distance to bird 30-100' Optical equipment

Length of time observed 5 minutes in 4 separate periods

Sex Unknown Plumage (e.g. Breeding) non-breeding

Overall appearance and relative size: Obviously a Townsend's Hermit type warbler

Bill: Color not noted. Shape like Townsends.

Crown and forehead: Bright green

Nape: bright green

Face: mostly very bright lemon yellow but with a darker superciliary line which bent down into the face once behind the eye, and then up again to the eye. The upper line of this triangle was the darkest of the three sides

Eye: dark

Throat: yellowish-white

Breast and sides: Smudgy black upper breast band extending in a discreet ring across the upper breast. Two black streaks extended down each side from the breast band. Lower breast below chest was immaculate white - no trace of yellow.

Belly and Flanks: Completely white except for a very inconspicuous smudge of pale yellow behind the thighs to the side of the vent. This yellow continued from both thighs and met at the vent, but was almost invisible at the vent. This yellow was definitely thought not to be present until we finally got a close view of the bird (~30-40')

Undertail coverts: white

Back: Bright green. This was seen a number of times by all observers present. No streaks

Wings: dark with two conspicuous white wing bars

Underwings: Not seen

Rump: Not noted

Uppertail coverts: Note noted

Upperside

Underside of tail: Same as Townsend's

Legs Dark

Behavior. Found twice feeding amongst flowers of Eucalyptus 75' up in canopy and also located feeding deliberately amongst Monterey cypress foliage about 15' up. Seemed to move slightly more deliberately than Townsend's Warbler. Acrobatics in flowers allowed us to get very good looks at the back.

Voice: Silent except for a chip note heard once which was recognizably different from both Townsend's and Hermit

Habitat: Suburban residential area with lush growth, dense trees - eucalyptus, pepper, cypress - on coastal promontory

How identification was decided – elimination of similar species:
Townsend's, Hermit, and Townsend's x Hermit hybrid eliminated because —

(1) Bright green (not olive or gray-green) back noted by all observers — conspicuous
(2) No white on breast or belly eliminates Townsend's
(3) Very faint cheek marks eliminate Townsend's
(4) Very conspicuous black chest eliminates Hermit and probably all Townsend's this time of year
(5) The yellow patches to the outside of the thighs on the flanks are apparently diagnostic; after looking at MVZ collection of these warblers, almost all Black-thr Greens show this but none of the Townsend's or Hermits do. This mark was though definitely not to be present until we finally got an incredibly good view of the bird (40' at 15' up in tree).

after looking at extensive series in MVZ, I'm not convinced that there isn't a moderate amount of overlap between imms. of Townsend's and BT Greens in back color.

Prior experience with this species and similar species: About 10 breeding ♂♂ in Mass in 1965-66 but none since. My first in Calif and my first in Fall plumage

Bill: Dendroica-type, dark

Crown and forehead: yellowish green

Nape: yellowish green, faint streaks

Face: yellowish green with faint dark superciliary

Behavior: Slowly foraging in low bushes and even on ground at the base of a wall enclosing the cemetery. Perched in full view numerous times, including once on top of a grave stone.

Voice: Silent

Habitat: Shrubrow and bare dirt underneath shrubs in a grassy cemetery with scattered trees on a coastal promontory

How identification was decided – elimination of similar species:

Combination of yellowish underparts, greenish upperparts, two white wingbars, back stripes eliminates everything but Blackpoll.

Blackpoll eliminated by

① bay-colored sides noted by all observers
② dark not yellow legs

Also the breast was not as heavily streaked as most Blackpolls and the yellow of the underparts was a paler yellow – not as much of a greenish-yellow as Blackpoll.

Species Ovenbird Date(s) 20 October 1973

Location railroad station at Kelso

County San Bernadino State Calif Elevation

Observer Van Remsen Number of birds 1

Time of Day Light conditions shade but still OK

Distance to bird 40' Optical equipment 10×50 binocs

Length of time observed 30 seconds

Sex Unknown Plumage (e.g. Breeding) ~~adult?~~ ~~immature?~~ not certain (orange seemed bright enough for adult, but not extensive enough)

Overall appearance and relative size: When first flushed, I called it as either a Hylocichla thrush or an Ovenbird. When perched, it was obviously too small to be a thrush - size of sparrow.

Bill: Thin and pointed. Seemed thicker at base than most warbler bills

Crown and forehead: rusty orange streak down center of brown crown. There was not a strong dark border as illustrated in Peterson's E. to W. Birds - just a trace of a border around the orange Nape: brown - orange didn't seem to come down that far.

Face: Seemed solid brown except for a very conspicuous white eye-ring

Eye: dark

Throat: whitish with a dark whisker on either side composed of small dark spots

Breast and sides: very bright clean white which highlighted the sharply defined oval spots which proceeded down the breast in rows

Belly and flanks: mostly pure white - some very faint small spots on flanks

Undertail coverts: white

Back: Uniform brown

Wings: Uniform brown

Underwings: Not seen

Rump: Brown

Uppertail coverts: Brown

Upperside of tail: [illegible]

Underside of tail: Not seen

Legs: dark? Can't really remember

Behavior: Skulking on ground under a closely trimmed hedge. Flushed and flew a few feet and then disappeared in shrub row again. Flushed once more and it landed on exposed palm frond 20' up and remained motionless for 30 seconds before disappearing again for good

Voice: Silent

Habitat: Oasis of Chinese elms, lawns, hedges in middle of high desert

How identification was decided – elimination of similar species:

Not a Hylocichla because

1. too small
2. breast spots much too large and well defined – not messy like a Thrush
3. undercolor of underparts immaculate white – no brown smudging

Not a waterthrush because:

1. no strong eyeline
2. waterthrush lacks strong, complete eye-ring
3. waterthrush has markings are more streak-like – not well defined spots

Diagnostic character

– I know of no other species of similar type bird with a rusty orange crown

There was a nest with young in one of the palm trees (25' up) in this park. I was really impressed with the size of the males bill and tale. Varied vocabulary, but two distinctive calls were (1) a "chup-chup-chup, zeeeee" the "zeeee" being very much higher and very metallic. (2) a ~~chack-chu~~ rolling trill somewhat like Gila Woodpecker. The regular call note seemed to be higher pitched than Yellow-headed Blackbird – thus not nearly so deep as to be proportional to body size

Species Chestnut-collared Longspur Date(s) 3 November 1973

Location Drakels Beach Rd., Point Reyes Nat. Seashore

County Marin State Calif Elevation 200'

Observer Van Remsen Number of birds 3

Time of Day 0830 Light conditions excellent - sun from behind

Distance to bird 50' Optical equipment 15X telescope, 10x50 binocs

Length of time observed 5 minutes

Sex Unknown Plumage (e.g. Breeding) non-breeding

Overall appearance and relative size: Two were seen in same scope field with Lapland Longspur - slightly smaller but otherwise similar shape

Bill: possibly smaller proportionally than Lapland's

Crown and forehead: finely striped dark brown and very pale brown

Nape: finely streaked (no rusty)

Face: pattern like winter Lapland but much less distinct - not as much contrast between cheek patch and eyeline, etc. Buffier than Lapland

Eye: can't remember

Throat: buffy white

Breast and sides: very pale brown, some faint streaks

Belly and flanks: whitish brown

Undertail coverts:

Back: pale with dark streaking proceeding down body axis - generally grayish brown

Wings: ~~Brown~~ with rusty area in wing coverts like Lapland's Gray-brown

Underwings: not seen

Rump: brown - contrasted with grayer back

Uppertail coverts: brownish

emsen, J.V. 1973

July 11

Upperside of tail: Mostly white except for tail tip and some dark in center. very strikingly white, much more so than Lapland

Underside of tail: not seen

Legs: can't remember

Behavior: feeding very tamely in pasture. walking.

Voice: A rich warbled chirping call, very different from either the rattle or the clear whistle note given by the Laplands They could easily be located by the different call

Habitat: heavily grazed cattle pasture

How identification was decided – elimination of similar species:

not Lapland because

1 – call note different
2 – plumage differences – much less contrastingly marked
3 – too much white in tail
4 – definitely smaller not McCown's because

1 – call not different
2 – no rusty patch at bend of wing at rest or in flight

Prior experience with this species and similar species: Breeding plumage birds only, in Colorado

Procyon lotor

July 4 373 Gravatt Dr, Oakland, Alameda Co, Calif: 1 ♀ (prominent teats) cautiously approached me while eating my dinner on the front patio. I went inside and got some "Wheat Thins" while she decided that the spaghetti sauce left on my plate wasn't edible. Wheat Thins were acceptable and she came as close as three feet to get them and a whole package of graham crackers. She would have come closer but I shooshed her back. She finally tired of crackers, after eating them squatting on her haunches right in front of us.

July 8 373 Gravatt: Probably same individual appeared at 0350 and ate steak fat, bread, graham crackers. Appeared again at 2000 and waited at the glass door until we brought it Food — bread, chicken fat, graham crackers

July 9 373 Gravatt: Female brought her two cubs to the porch ~ 2100. They all ate graham crackers, chicken fat. Fem. kept young from a chicken bone and anything else she was eating. One young bullied the other one. The young were 12-14" long nose to tail tip. When a dog passed by, they all scurried into the bushes. On both occasions (happened twice) the subordinate young one was lagging behind in the retreat to the bushes. The female had come at 2005 while it was still light to eat two peanut butter + jelly sandwiches, but did not bring the young until after dark.

July 10 373 Gravatt: ♀ under bird feeder at 1815; looked up at me on balcony as if to beg for food.

July 18 373 Gravatt: one came to back door and I fed it left over pancakes Mrs. Asling tells me one has been here every night, but the females babies have not returned. Mrs. Asling claims two adults were here on July 17.

July 26 373 Gravatt: two adults squabbling over scraps.

July 27 373 Gravatt: 1

July 29 373 Gravatt: 1 begging on porch. It comes up to the screen door and scratches on it to get your attention and then sits and stares in the window until fed.
